DIXON DOCTOR HELD FOR DEATH OF GIRL

DR. SAMUEL M. GREEN OF THIS CITY IS CHARGED WITH SLAYING 16-YEAR-OLD MARY COLEMAN.

IS IN JAIL IN MT. CARROLL

DR. GREEN WAS NABBED BY THE CARROLL COUNTY SHERIFF LAST NIGHT IN DIXON.

WILL BE BROUGHT TO LEE COUNTY

The Two Boys, in Confession, Say Green Committed Criminal Operation on Sister and Sweetheart—Girl Died Yesterday Morning at Home in Milledgeville—Coroner Schrieter's Investigation Results in Warrant for Dixonite—Hearing Was Held This Morning in Savanna—Physician Is Held With out Bonds—Trial to Be in Dixon.

Savanna, Ill., July 13—Special to Telegraph—This afternoon Coroner Schrieter, of Carroll county, ordered Samuel M. Green, M. D., of Dixon, Ill., held to the grand jury without bonds for the unlawful slaying of Miss Mary Coleman the sixteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Coleman, well-to-do Milledgeville residents, on whom the Dixon physician is alleged to have performed a criminal operation in his office about ten days ago.

The alleged victim of the operation died yesterday morning at the home of her parents in Milledgeville.

Death Starts Investigation.

Upon the death of the girl yesterday, no certificate of death from a physician could be secured, and for this reason the coroner of Carroll county was called to make an investigation. His investigation brought out the following alleged facts:

That Mary Coleman, who was a very beautiful and popular young girl of perhaps the best family in Milledgeville, had been keeping company with a nineteen year old lad, Clarence Maxwell by name, son of well-to-do parents in the country near Milledgeville. The young man is alleged to have implicated the girl and he and the girl's brother, Frank Coleman, brought her to a Sterling physician, asking him to help them. This he refused point blank to do. The trio is then said to have gone to Polo, and in that town they were refused medical assistance. Then, according to the testimony given before the coroner this morning, the three came to Dixon and applied to Dr. S. M. Green and he, it is charged, performed the operation.

To Sterling Hotel.

Immediately after the alleged performing of the illegal operation, the two boys, the brother and the other, took the girl to Sterling, Ill., and put her in a room in the Randolph hotel, where she remained for four days with out the care of a physician. The Maxwell lad then came to Sterling and found the girl in the hotel in a very serious condition. He became alarmed and appealed to a relative of his, who is a Sterling physician, and that physician, after he became aware of the nature of the case, refused to have anything to do with it, but was persuaded to see the girl. He advised that she be taken home to her family.

She was taken to Milledgeville less than a week ago, and was being treated by local physicians, when, night before last, she became violently ill and yesterday morning she passed away.

The Maxwell boy then confessed his part in the whole affair to his parents, who immediately went to Sterling to secure counsel to defend him.

His confession resulted in a warrant being sworn out for the Dixon doctor. The warrant was placed in the hands of the Carroll county sheriff, who came to Dixon last night, arrested Dr. Green at his home, 429 Madison avenue, and took him to Savanna, the home of the coroner, on the midnight train, where a hearing was held this morning.

Both of the boys, the brother of the dead girl and young Maxwell, were at the hearing and confessed to the whole story on the advice of their attorneys, and their testimony contained the above alleged facts.

Clarence Maxwell was held on $1,000 bonds, as a state witness, but the brother, Frank Coleman, was released.

In Jail at Mt. Carroll.

Dr. Green was taken to Mt. Carroll by the sheriff this afternoon and placed in the Carroll county jail.

Trial in Lee County.

He will be kept in the Carroll county jail until the necessary steps have been taken to have him transferred to Lee county, for, as the crime he is charged with is said to have been committed in Lee county, the matter must be laid before the Lee county grand jury, who will determine, if they can, his guilt or innocence, as the case may be, and in case of an indictment he will be tried in the Lee county circuit court at Dixon. He will have a hearing as soon as he is brought to Dixon and the Dixon judge or jury will decide as to whether he will be freed on bonds or kept imprisoned.

CYCLONE KILLS TWO AND INJURES MANY

TERRIFIC WIND LIFTED BASEBALL GRANDSTAND INTO AIR AND SCATTERED IT ON OWN SQUARE, KILLING HORSES.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 13—Special to Telegraph—This city was struck, early today, by a cyclone that killed one man and injured 40 more persons and did many thousand dollars' damage.

The wind literally lifted the enormous baseball park grandstand into the air and tearing it to shreds scattered the debris all over the market square, where the farmers had tied their horses. Several horses were killed by flying timbers.

Wisconsin Visited.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 13—Special to Telegraph—The cyclone that devastated portions of Michigan also visited spots in Wisconsin. A woman was killed in Kenosha by the shock. Many persons were struck and injured by flying debris.

ASSEMBLY OPENS TWO WEEKS FROM TODAY

DIXON MARINE BAND WILL BEGIN THE ACTIVITIES ON THAT DATE.

WILL GIVE LECTURE ON "ABE" LINCOLN

Benj. Chapin Will Appear Wednesday, Aug. 7—"The Blind Preacher of the Potomac" Will Lecture on Sunday, July 28—Rev. Howard Here Again.

Two weeks from today the Dixon Marine band will open the twenty-fifth annual session of the Rock River Assembly. The band will play a concert in the park at 1 o'clock. At 7 o'clock the same evening the band will give another concert of one hour's program.

Benjamin Chapin is coming to the Assembly and will deliver his lecture, "Abe" Lincoln. Chapin looks like Lincoln. He knows enough about Lincoln to talk two hours, if necessary, and he tells what he knows of Lincoln in a manner that inspires his hearers and people after hearing this man, leave him determined to learn more of the great emancipator. Mr. Chapin will lecture Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 7th.

Rev. H. C. Haighton, D. D., West Virginia, "The Blind Preacher of the Potomac," will preach on Sunday morning, July 28th.

For the Fourth year Rev. E. G. Howard has been secured as Bible teacher.

By this time thousands of homes in this portion of the state have been supplied with the Rock River Assembly, and if the book is read carefully and the program studied, there is no question but from every home where the Assembly has been left, there will be present at the Assembly several persons.

FIELD IN FINE CONDITION FOR GAME

CONTEST TOMORROW BETWEEN STARS AND MT. MORRIS WILL BE FAST ONE.

IS FEATURE GAME OF SEASON

Mt. Morris Is Strongest Lineup Stars Have Played and Great Interest Is Taken in Game at the Park.

Last night's rain was the one thing needed to bring the diamond at the Athletic park into the best possible condition, following the hard work put on it by the Dixon Stars, who had re-sketched it and mown the outfield. The infield is now as solid as rock, and following the rain is very fast.

Consequently it is expected that tomorrow afternoon's game between the Stars and Mt. Morris Independents, which is to be the season's big game will be replete with fast work. The Stars are determined to take the game and Carp Huber, who has been pitching some mighty fine ball all season, has been groomed for this engagement and is now ready to pitch his arm off if necessary to win. Joe Keenan will be back in the game thus insuring quite some battery.

The Mt. Morris team is the strongest the Stars have been called upon to meet this season and the boys realize that they are going to have their hands full coping the bacon. Conners, the hard-hitting find, who broke into last Sunday's game with a homer and a double, will probably be in the lineup with his mighty war club, and the Stars will put their strongest lineup in the field. The game will begin promptly at three o'clock, and ladies will be admitted free.

Illinois: Local thunderstorms Saturday; Sunday probably fair, moderate south winds, becoming variable Saturday night. Sunrise, 4:26; sunset, 7:27; moonrise, 2:52.

MISS CASEY RESIGNS FROM THE HOSPITAL

VALUED SUPERINTENDENT OF KATHERINE SHAW BETHEA HOSPITAL TO LEAVE AUGUST FIRST.

Miss Casey, superintendent of the Katherine Shaw Betha hospital in Dixon has resigned her position, the resignation, which was handed to the board of directors to take effect on August 1.

Many learn with regret that Miss Casey is to leave the hospital and Dixon. She has been with the institution one and one-half years, coming to Dixon from Milwaukee with the highest possible recommendations, having had fourteen years' experience in Trinity hospital, Milwaukee, but during her stay here has done a great deal of good in the local hospital, as she has great efficiency in hospital management, and has graduated many nurses who left the institution with a training for their profession far above the average. As a disciplinarian Miss Casey is very superior to the average superintendent. She is a woman of high mental and moral attributes and has the respect of the many hundreds who have had to do with her in a business and professional, as well as social, way.

As yet the hospital board has made no arrangements for a new superintendent.

LATEST SERIAL STARTS TONIGHT

READ THE OPENING INSTALLMENT OF "THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD" ON PAGE SIX—THIS ABSORBING STORY WILL BE RUN.

On page 6 of this evening's Telegraph will be found the opening chapters of the Telegraph's latest serial story, "The Carpet From Bagdad," by Harold McGrath, who also wrote "The Man on the Box," and countless other excellent novels.

"The Carpet From Bagdad" is a brilliant, absorbing entertainment which makes willing slaves of its readers from the opening chapters until the final releases them against their will.

The story is that of a group of Americans who meet thrilling dangers in the mystical surroundings of the near east and who return only to be involved in more dangerous and remarkable complications. Don't miss this swiftly moving tale of love and adventure in the Moslem country. A story of smugglers, card sharps, and an ancient rug and a caravan in the desert.

A liberal installment of the story will be run in the Telegraph every evening until it is completed, starting tonight.

RETURN TO DIXON.

J. C. Schuele and wife of Nokomis have returned to Dixon to reside. Mr. Schuele assumes a position in the office of the Reynolds Wire Co., having resigned his position in a bank at Nokomis. Mr. and Mrs. Schuele are former residents of this city and have many friends here to welcome their return.

COURT CONVISED

AND ADJOURNED

The Lee county circuit court was opened for a short session this morning by Judge Farrand, but neither of the attorneys interested in the railroad cases which were to have been heard, were ready to proceed with the cases, and accordingly Judge Farrand adjourned court until July 27.

LORIMER IS OUSTED FROM SENATE SEAT

ILLINOIS SENATOR IS VOTED OUT OF OFFICE BY HIS COLLEAGUES.

STORMIEST DAY IN HISTORY

Senators Deprive Wm. Lorimer of Seat by Vote of 56 to 28—Decision Ends Long Drawn Out Battle.

BULLETIN, 3 P. M.

Washington, D. C., July 13—Special to Telegraph—By a vote of 56 to 28, Senator William Lorimer of Illinois was deprived of his seat in the senate of the United States today.

This judgment of the senate terminated one of the stormiest legislative days that congressional history has ever known, and the ousting of Wm. Lorimer from his seat in the senate is the outcome of the long drawn out and bitterly fought effort to prove that Lorimer's seat in the senate was obtained by the use of bribe money in the Illinois legislature.

Washington, July 13.—The senate recessed again without final action on the Lorimer case. After Senator Lorimer had been speaking for five hours, Senator Smoot moved a recess today. The motion carried. Senator Lorimer had not concluded his speech.

Calling on Senator Kern of Indiana to point to anything in his private, business or political life where he had been guilty of wrongdoing, Senator Lorimer declared he would "walk out of yonder door and never enter it again" if Kern "made good."

Senator Kern was not in his seat when Lorimer delivered the challenge. "I have been charged by this senate from Indiana on the floor of the senate with political wrongdoing," Lorimer cried. "Here and now I challenge him to point out to this senate anything in this record, anything he knows, anything he has ever heard, anything anybody has ever told him—I will make it broader than that—let him point to anything where I have been guilty of wrongdoing in private, in commercial, in financial or in political life, and if he will do it here and now, I'll not embarrass you by voting on my case. When he has done it I will walk out of yonder door and never occupy my seat again in this chamber."

"Come on, Senator Kern, you have alimed and aimed this record with suspicion; come on, now, and make good."

Defends "Hinky Dink" and Abrahams. The Illinois senator took exception to Mr. Kern's reference to his associates, among whom were "Hinky Dink" Kenna, "Manny" Abrahams and John Broderick.

"None," he said, "have lifted up more of the fallen or helped more people on to a better life than Michael O. Kenna, and I like to call attention to his charity."

When the senate resumed it was confronted with the possibility of a further prolongation of the debate. Senator La Follette appeared in the chamber and intimated to friends that he wanted to discuss the case after Mr. Lorimer concluded.

Senator Lorimer appeared much refreshed when he again took the floor. He informed inquirers during the recess that he did not know how much longer he would speak.

He launched once more into an attack on Theodore Roosevelt and characterized as "inaccurate and unreliable" the report of the minority members of the committee which investigated his election.

Well-filled galleries and an attentive audience of senators and house members heard Mr. Lorimer. Dramatic gestures again characterized his delivery as he strode back and forth in the center aisle of the senate chamber.

"Common People Give $1,900,000."

The attack on Mr. Roosevelt with which he opened his speech, was based on testimony given by George B. Cortelyou before a senate committee regarding the $1,900,000 campaign fund raised for the Republican presidential campaign in 1904. Mr. Lorimer referred to the ex-president as the "custodian of all the morals of the country, private and public."

"Of course," he exclaimed, "not a cent of that $1,900,000 could have been contributed by the predatory wealth of the country. Surely all of it was the free gift of the common people for whom this man is the great champion. No malefactor contributed to that fund—only the common people of whom he was the guardian."

The letter from President Taft to Mr. Roosevelt, expressing the hope that Lorimer would be ousted, which became public in the pre-convention campaign, again was taken up by Lorimer. He drew attention to President Taft's phrase emphasizing the "necessity of winning."

He declared his enemies had tried to win "not by a free and fair fight, but by sneaking up behind like a thief in the night."

"Was mortal man ever more completely surrounded by conspiracy and intrigue?" exclaimed Lorimer dramatically. "The president of the United States, William Taft; Theodore Roosevelt, the ex-president; a former Democratic candidate for the presidency, William Jennings Bryan, and the trust press of the country all were in it—all joined in the conspiracy to poison the minds of the citizenship in order that one man might be destroyed to satisfy the malice of the most corrupt set of newspaper owners known in the history of the country."

Appeals to Final Judge. Throwing up his hands and turning his face upward, Senator Lorimer dramatically cried:

"Let him judge who shall be the final judge, whether it is correct to do unto others as you would have them do unto you. By that rule have I lived and by that rule shall I die, though all the world, including the senate, shall condemn me."

DENEEN SAYS HE WILL STAY IN RACE

GOVERNOR DENIES RUMOR THAT HE WANTS LORIMER'S SEAT IN THE SENATE.

GOVERNOR MAY APPOINT SUCCESSOR

Believed in Springfield That Deneen Will Not Call Special Session But Will Name Lorimer's Successor Himself.

Springfield, Ill., July 13—Special to Telegraph—"I am a candidate for governor of Illinois and shall continue to be," declared Gov. Deneen today to newspaper men when asked regarding what foundation there was for reports printed that he might resign as governor and then have Lieutenant Governor Oglesby appoint him as the successor to Senator Wm. Lorimer in the event of the latter being ousted from his seat by the senate.

"There is absolutely no foundation for such talk," said Gov. Deneen. "I have no intention of being a candidate for any position other than governor. I have not held any conferences regarding the appointment of a successor to Senator Lorimer, should he be ousted from his seat, or in regard to calling a special session of the legislature with any person."

In the event of the ousting of Senator Lorimer it is believed here that the governor will appoint his successor and that he will not call a special session of the legislature to elect his successor, as the next regular session of the general assembly will meet next January.

MISS HELEN HEFT COMMITTED SUICIDE IN BASEMENT OF MANHATTAN CAFE.

DRANK THREE OUNCES OF CARBOLIC ACID

Girl Employed in Restaurant Was Despondent From Ill Health—Was Alone in Cellar and Took Poison—When Discovered Cried, "Mary, Save Me! I Have Taken Carbolic Acid!"—Died a Few Minutes Later.

Despondent over ill-health, which in the past has caused her to threaten her own life, Miss Helen L. Heft, an employe of the Manhattan cafe, this morning committed suicide by taking carbolic acid shortly after she went to work.

It was a few minutes before 5 o'clock that the unfortunate girl came to work with the other young ladies employed at the restaurant, and she went down stairs with them to don her working clothing. She remained in the basement after the others had returned up stairs.

Acid Acted Quickly.

A few minutes afterward, probably not more than three or four, Miss Mary Brown returned to the basement with a kitchen which is usually kept there during the day. As she went to the bottom of the stairs, the despondent girl rushed to her and throwing her arms about her, cried:

"Mary, save me! I've taken carbolic acid!"

Miss Brown immediately called Edward Hooker, one of the proprietors, who at once rushed across the street and called Dr. A. F. Moore, who returned within a minute with him. In the meantime the suffering young lady had been carried up stairs; but despite the most hurried and stringent efforts on the part of Dr. Moore, she died within fifteen or twenty minutes.

Purchased Poison This Morning.

It developed that Miss Heft had been addicted to severe headaches, and that she was suffering with such this morning before she went to her work. She asked for some camphor before leaving home and, securing it, she started to work.

On the way to the restaurant she stopped at Rowland Bros.' drug store and purchased three ounces of carbolic acid from Roy Withers, one of the clerks, stating that she wished the acid for her mother.

From Rowland's she went directly to the restaurant, and took the acid as stated above.

Inquest This Afternoon.

The remains were taken to the home of the girl's mother, Mrs. Emelia Heft, 512 Crawford avenue, where the funeral will be held, probably Monday afternoon. Coroner Smith of Amboy was notified and arrived here at noon, holding the inquest this afternoon.

The jurors investigating the death of Miss Helen Heft, consisted of W. W. Phillips, Freeman Robinson, Robert Sterling, James Drew, S. S. Netz and E. E. Holdridge. Their investigation brought out no new particulars in the sad affair.

Obituary. Helen E. Heft was born in Dixon Nov. 13, 1892, and spent her entire life in this city. She received her education in the Dixon schools and after completing her school work accepted a position in the milk factory, where she earned, by her cheerful and industrious disposition, the lasting regard of all. Ill health compelled her to give up her position there, and she started work at the Manhattan cafe, where she was employed at the time of her unfortunate death.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Emelia Heft, three brothers, Valentine, John and August, and two sisters, Mrs. Roy L. Smith and Miss Marie, both of Dixon.

FUNERAL HELD SUNDAY.

The funeral of Miss Helen Heft will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of her mother Mrs. Emelia Heft, 512 Crawford avenue. Rev. Fisher of the Christian church will officiate. Burial will be at Oakwood cemetery.

Social Happenings

HOROSCOPE.

JULY 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6

Are kind, loving, true, loyal and devoted to those you love, but have a strong will and can be domineering. BUNCH IN 400-METER FINAL Albert L. Gutterson of Vermont Wins the Broad Jump and Establishes a New World's Record—Young Is Disqualified.

Stockholm, July 13.—Splendid indeed was the showing made by the United States in the Olympic games. Yet in justice to America the country suffered unjustly through the action of the Swedish officials in disqualifying Donald A. Young after he had fairly beaten Braun of Germany in a semi-final heat of the 400 meter run.

Young drew the pole with Braun next to him. The German kept pace with the Boston man, but before they reached the first turn Braun evidently decided to sprint up and grab the more favorable position on the swing. The two reached the turn with Braun possibly two feet in the lead because of his sudden sprint, far too slight a margin to justify the German in attempting to take the inside position without committing a foul.

Yankee Wins Decisively. After this incident the two men kept their regular positions and the American showed his superiority over the German by winning decisively.

Talpaie, the Finn, beat the Yankee fairly in the discus throw. His world record heave of 148 1/2 feet justified his victory over our men, Byrd and Duncan. Talpaie was wonderfully consistent.

Albert L. Gutterson of Vermont proved himself the greatest broad jumper in the world. He was so much better than any competitor that every one seemed genuinely sorry he did not create a new world's record.

The Americans worked harder than was necessary to beat out Finland in the 3,000-meter team race. The Finns at best were a one man array. Both Sweden and England expect to win the final of this 3,000-meter team race.

HEAD COVERED WITH WHITE PIMPLES

Went to Ear, Shoulders and Whole Body. Thick and Sticky on Head. Eruption Covered With Blood. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Ransom, Ill.—"The trouble started on my baby when he was only about two weeks old. Started like little white pimples, looked like an old scab of blood and matter. His whole head was covered for a few months then it went to his ear, shoulders, and his whole body. It seemed to come out thick and sticky on his head, while on the other parts of his body it was more like water coming out of the skin. He would scratch until the eruption would be all covered with blood and gradually spread. The least little stir or rub would cause the sores to bleed, spread and itch. Never had a full night's sleep, restless all night.

"The sores were horrid to look at. It lasted until he was about two and a half years old. Then we saw an excruciating advertisement in the paper to use —, but it did no good. Then we used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. We put the Cuticura Ointment on thick at bed time and put a tight hood on so he could not scratch the sores. Then we washed it clean with Cuticura Soap and warm water twice a day, and he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. F. Sulzberger, Dec. 30, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

For Troubled-faced men should use Cuticura Soap shaving stick, 25c. Sample free.

What odds on Lorimer?

The Chicago "Trust" papers will have one awful time finding dope after Lorimer gets his and Roosevelt starts his bull moose party.

But at that we're getting mighty tired of seeing that satisfied expression that creeps over every democrat's face whenever politics is mentioned.

Being blackballed from the Peoria Ave. Nature club Wally Worthington says he's going to start one of his own. The principal feature of the new organization will be that every member must stay out nights until after midnight.

The new expression is: How would you like to be the garage man?

Supplanting that old chestnut on the ice man.

Essay on Man.

(Published by Request)

Man comes into the world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay here his life is one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings. In his infancy he is an angel, in his boyhood he is a devil, and in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up. In his duties he is a darn fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a check he is a thief and then the law raises — with him. If he is poor he is a poor manager and has no sense; if he is rich, he is dishonest and considered smart; if he is in politics he is a crook and a grafter; if he isn't in politics he's an undesirable citizen because you can't place him; if he goes to church he is a hypocrite, if he donates to charity he does it for show; if he doesn't he is stingy and a tight-wad. When he first comes into the world everybody wants to kiss him; before he goes out they all want to kick him. If he dies young, there was a great future before him; while if he lives to a ripe old age he is in the way and only living to save funeral expenses.

Historic Blackguards

By Albert Payson Terhune

Jean Jacques Rousseau, Philosopher and Scoundrel

JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU, self-confessed thief, wrote strongly on uprightness. He also preached fiery discourses on the sacredness of domestic affection—and sent his own five children to a founding asylum. He changed religions as another man would change from summer to winter clothes. A writer on morality, his own morals were unspicable. He was ever eager to receive aid; and still more industrious in abusing benefactors. He had a genius for philosophic writings—and a far greater genius for making enemies. The kindest thing that can be said about him personally is that he was probably more or less insane. Here is his story:

Rousseau was the son of a Swiss watchmaker. His father in 1722, when the lad was ten years old, became involved in a street row and had to leave his Geneva home, calmly deserting his family. Jean Jacques was brought up by his mother's relatives, who apprenticed him at thirteen to a notary. The boy and his master could not get on together, so Jean was apprenticed over again, this time to an engraver. All his long life Rousseau quarreled with everybody into whose society he was thrown. He began with the engraver. At sixteen he "jumped" his apprenticeship and ran away from Geneva.

He then began a series of wanderings which were more or less interesting, but scarcely profitable either to undergo or tell about. He changed his religion at the outset, encountering some rather doubtful adventures, and at last became a footman in the household of a Mme. de Verceilles. While he was working there he stole a costly ribbon. The theft was discovered. Rousseau saved himself from punishment by falsely accusing a maid servant of the theft. The tale of this wholly shameful affair is found in his celebrated "Confessions."

When his employer died, Rousseau found another situation—and promptly lost it on account of his conduct. His experience for the next few years led him through all grades of society, from vagabondage to court circles. It was not until 1745 that he won any fame. Then he became known as a clever writer and musician. Several persons of high rank took an interest in his career. From each of these people he accepted what aid he could get, then quarreled with his benefactors and usually spoke and wrote ill of them.

In a prize essay, written in 1750, he openly declared that progress and higher civilization had proved a curse to mankind. This essay made him for a time the idol of Paris' artificial and novelty-seeking society. He followed up his literary success by a really beautiful opera. But his attacks on various French customs and ideals made Paris an uncomfortable abode for him. Back he went to Geneva (again changing his religion to fit his surroundings) and met with a cordial reception from the learned men of Switzerland.

Here he took up his literary work again and dazzled the world by his "problem novels" and philosophical treatises. But he continued his life effort of making as many enemies as possible. And such enemies as his personality could not reach were made by his writings. His novel "Emile"—a radical sort of educational thesis in fiction form—was condemned by the Paris parliament; and Rousseau dared not set foot in the French capital for fear of arrest. Other works of his were denounced by the Swiss authorities. His "Contrat Social" (which demanded that governments be ruled by the people and preached universal suffrage) brought down upon him the hatred of conservative thinkers. Altogether, he began to find it hard to choose a place of abode where he would be safe from persecution.

He went to England and there quarreled with his patrons, behaved insolently toward the king, and found it convenient to come back to the continent of Europe. This time he was allowed to settle in Paris. His health had become shattered. So had his mind. To add to his woes, he married Therese Le Vasseur, former cook in a third-rate inn. Their five children he sent to a founding asylum, thus giving his enemies a fine chance to compare his unnatural action with the high sentiments he had written about the sanctity of the home and the education of the young. Therese's mother was the typical comic paper mother-in-law. She rendered Rousseau's home life miserable.

On July 2, 1778, crushed under real and imaginary woes, Rousseau died in a fit. Some historians think despair drove him to suicide.

His "Confessions"—a wonderful if unreliable book—give the man's distorted view of his own life and of life in general. A genius, a blackguard, and probably—in later years, at least—a semi-lunatic.

SPEAKING ABOUT LOVE

FOUR CHERISHED ADAGES ARE CALLED MERE JOKES.

Pessimistic Writer Undertakes to Show That These Oft-Quoted Expressions Concerning Tender Passion Are Only Nonsense.

In regard to love we hear expressions like these:

"Love rules all."

"All the world loves a lover."

"A maid should obey the dictates of heart."

"Love laughs at locksmiths."

And others too numerous to mention.

Perhaps the first one is the best joke of the lot. Love rules all! That is one of the funniest things you ever heard! Some even go so far as to think children can be ruled by love.

It has been seen in practice. This is the way it works:

"Come, now, Johnnie. Come, dear."

Not a hedge from Johnnie.

"Come on, darling. Mamma wants you to come now, sweetheart. Come on."

Nothing stirring.

"Johnnie must come now. Johnnie be a good boy. Mamma will give Johnnie a cookie tomorrow."

"Don't want to."

"Oh, yes, you must come! It is getting late now. Come on, dear."

Johnnie doesn't.

"Come on, now, Johnnie. You must come. Mamma's tired of waiting. Mamma spank!"

Johnnie still unconvinced.

Whack! Whack! Whack!

Johnnie comes.

"All the world loves a lover!" Another joke.

What do we love about him? Perhaps the belief that candy man love him, and that's about the extent of it.

In the olden days when the lover did a great deal of sighing and desperate hair pulling and provided entertainment for the neighbors by eloping with the girl once in a while, people felt mildly grateful for the show. But it hardly amounts to love. And certainly his serenading beneath her lattice was more likely to bring brickbats than demonstrations of affection.

"A maid should obey the dictates of her heart," is rather good.

Some people evidently adhere to the belief that "there is a heart that heaven has made for thee," or they have faith in the text of some humorous ballad.

But, as most of us know, when a fellow has special talents in the love making line, and time and inclination to perfect his talents, he can make any girl think he is the one to furnish the heart that "heaven has made for thee"; whereas, men who have neither time nor talent nor inclination in that direction must go unloved and unsung, and the latter kind of men could carry seven or eight of the former kind in his vest pocket.

Sometimes the young woman must choose between a college professor and a saloon keeper. One can give her social position and ear faces; the other an electric boughman and a pink plumed bonnet. It is hard to decide in such a case. The dictates of her heart are led in one direction by the ostrich plumes, and in the other by the prospect of having a hat off and at home expression at a college commencement—a very great thing, indeed, and a thing to create heart longing.

"Love laughs at locksmiths!" An ancient joke!

Girls do not elope by ladder any more. If they did the father would probably furnish the ladder.

To the Point.

E. R. Smith, formerly schoolbook man and now a farmer and fruit grower, tells a story of a boy's essay, written in a few seconds on the subject of suddenly coming into possession of wealth.

"The teacher instructed her pupils to write an essay on 'What Would I Do If I Suddenly Became Possessed of $10,000?'" relates Mr. Smith, "and she warned them that their work was to be seriously considered. Papers and pens were passed, and it was only a few seconds until one boy began to squirm in his seat, appeared to be in a hurry and suddenly announced he had finished."

"You're through already?" the teacher asked.

"Yes, I'm through."

"Remember, now, I'm going to mark your essay very closely. It doesn't seem like you could finish such a subject so quickly."

"Go ahead; I'm ready," the boy said.

"The teacher opened the folded paper and read:

"What would I do if I suddenly became possessed of $10,000?"

"Not a darned thing!"—Rebboth Sunday Herald.

Would Work Convicts on Roads.

California has the parole system, but it has also, unluckily, its fair share of convicts who can not be trusted at large, and it is now proposed to have a chain gang help in planting trees for the beautiful forty-two-mile highway which is to be constructed from Sacramento through Greenback lane. The trees will be placed 100 feet apart, and varieties will alternate, one kind running for three or four miles along the way. It is expected that as an attraction this handsome "loop" highway will be second only to Del Paso park.

Huffman was the third to be sent to prison in the legislative graft prosecutions.

AFTER LONG SUFFERING
These Two Women's Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Read Their Own Statements.

Cheneyville, La.—"Some time ago when in poor health, suffering from feminine ills, I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I soon felt better and gained in strength and flesh. A gradual improvement continued as I took the Compound, and from 120 pounds I now weigh 155, and feel that my life has been prolonged."

"I deeply regret that I did not know of your medicine long before I did. Friends often speak of the wonderful change in my health, and I tell them that your medicine did it."—Mrs. J. W. STANLEY, Cheneyville, La.

Distressing Case of Mrs. M. GARY, Chicago, Ill.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache and it has certainly made a new woman of me. After my first baby was born I was left a perfect wreck. I was so weak I could hardly do my household duties and suffered with an awful backache. But since I have used your Compound the pains in my back have left me and I am strong again."

"My mother used it also through Change of Life and speaks very highly of it. You can use this letter any way you wish. I think it is only fair for one who has suffered as much as I, to let others know of your great remedy."—Mrs. M. GARY, 2958 N. Ridgeway Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MRS. MORROW IS HIT
Witness Tells of Quarrel Just Before Shooting.

Testimony Proved to Be Sensational—Woman in Collapse at Gruesome Exhibit of Husband's Clothes.

Chicago, July 13.—Mrs. Rene B. Morrow entered the laboratory of her husband, Charles B. Morrow, the inventor and quarreled with him on the night of December 27, 1911, and her visit was followed by the two shots which ended Morrow's life.

This was the testimony given here in Mrs. Morrow's trial on a charge of murder in Judge Kersten's court by W. H. Palmer, a boarder, who occupied the room at the Morrow home at 4545 Michigan avenue, next to Morrow's laboratory.

Palmer's testimony was the first sensation springing by the state. He is the first witness to testify that Mrs. Morrow had left her room on the night of the tragedy and went to the second floor, where her husband was shot to death.

During the course of the hearing Mrs. Morrow collapsed when bloody clothes worn by her husband on the night he met his death were exhibited on the stand by Policeman J. J. Dunning, one of the witnesses.

Mrs. Morrow fell across the table of her attorney, broke into hysterical weeping, and sobbed aloud in her agony. Her sister, Mrs. Fred Foster, sprang to her assistance and with difficulty Mrs. Morrow was revived.

The Human Heart

The heart is a wonderful double pump, through the action of which the blood stream is kept sweeping round and round through the body at the rate of seven miles an hour. "Remember this, that our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without god, pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil." After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general breakdown, a tonic made of the glyceric extract of certain roots was the best corrective. THE CHINCH-BUG WAR

Arch Enemies of Farm Very Active — Farmers Must Act Together if Great Loss Is Prevented.

According to State Entomologist Dr. S. A. Forbes, the chinch bugs came through the winter without serious damage and are now developing in such quantities in the grain and grass fields of many counties in Illinois, especially in the southern half of the state, as to do serious harm to adjacent fields of corn unless wet weather prevails.

How They Work.

About April 25 the bugs left winter quarters and scattered, on the wing, to the crops available. They laid their eggs in the fall wheat, and in this state there are two generations during the year; the eggs for the first of which are laid in the spring, and those for the second in mid-summer. The first generation lives mainly in small grain, by preference in wheat, and the second generation lives mainly in corn. With the approach of winter they leave the crops and find protection in the clumps of grass and under leaves or similar shelter.

Time to Protect Corn Crop.

The situation at harvest time, when the bugs of the new generation have not yet reached the winged stage, is ripe for co-operative action on the part of farmers in infested communities to save the corn and other crops that are not yet matured.

After the ripening of the wheat the bugs will be obliged to leave the field on foot in search of food; and it is at this time that they may be destroyed in vast numbers by stopping and killing them on the borders of the field which they are trying to leave. If this is done by entire communities acting together on a prearranged plan, the chinch-bug population may be so reduced as greatly to lessen the danger of injury to the corn. If they are permitted to escape from a field of grain on foot and to enter the fields of corn, they may be destroyed as they collect on outer rows by spraying them there with a dilute tobacco preparation which will kill all the bugs it touches without injury to the corn plant. By this means the first and worst injury to the corn crop may be prevented; but the crop will be subjected to a later and more general injury as the bugs which have escaped from small grain get their wings and fly into the corn to lay eggs there for the second generation.

The chinch-bug multiplies at an average rate of 100 to 1, and it is especially important that the generation which breeds in the wheat and oats shall be kept down to the lowest possible number.

INTERSTATE PHONE TRANSFER COMPLETED

Sterling, July 13.—Special to the Telegraph.—The Toledo Ohio syndicate which has buying into and obtaining control of the Interstate Telephone Company, yesterday effected the transfer of all of that company's stock and holdings to themselves. The Ohio syndicate paid $175,000, for the Interstate Company and the local system, which takes in many towns in Northern Illinois, is now entirely out of the hands of former stockholders and officers.

MINERAL SPRINGS PARK SOLD

Sterling, July 13.—Special to the Telegraph.—The Mineral Springs Park Association has sold twenty-six acres of their park, comprising all of the grounds with the exception of the race track, to the Martin Bros. of Sterling. The price paid was $11,500.

The old association retained the race track and will hold races and meets of various sorts there in the future, as they have in the past.

CAUSE OF SLIME IN REFRIGERATORS

The latest natural ice Bulletin contains the following article that is of interest to many:

Many ice men have puzzled over the question as to where the slime comes from that clogs up the drain pipes of refrigerators. When machine ice plants are established in natural ice towns usually their strongest argument, and the point most advertised, is that there is no slime in man-made ice. Then next season, the natural ice man hears from his old customers who had changed to the machine ice that they don't like it, as it has slime in it, "caused by the ammonia," etc. The explanation is as follows: All materials of whatever nature, including metals, are always giving off small particles of their substance to the air, that is, evaporating. The food in the refrigerator throws off portions of organic matter in evaporating, and these minute particles fill the circulating current of air flowing from the ice chamber downward, thence up, depositing this matter on the ice. From the ice it is carried by the film of water on the melting ice to the drain pipe, eventually filling it. Ice can be melted by the ton in containers that are not used for refrigerators, where it comes into contact only with air, and not air which has passed over food, and no slime is ever found. In other words, the slime does not come from the ice, but from the articles being cooled or kept cool in refrigerators, and it will be found in drain pipes whether natural or manufactured ice is used.

STERLING MAN TO SLEEP IN A TREE

Clovis Lincoln, living at Sterling is erecting a sleeping apartment twenty-five feet from the ground in the top of a tree near his home. The apartment will have a board floor over and around which there will be a frame upon which wire screening will be attached, making the apartment bug proof, but susceptible to any breath of air going at that height.

NO subject is closer to a woman's heart than properly designed corsets. The manufacturers of Gossard Corsets have spent years and thousands of dollars in bringing them up to their present perfection. You can hardly appreciate what one of these corsets mean to a dress or suit.

MODEL L. (as illustrated) is suitable for a plump figure, with a naturally small waist. Every line of the figure is enhanced by this model. It encases the form without undue suppression, yet prevents the hips from spreading. It is high in the back with bust gores widened sufficiently to prevent the bust from pushing up when the wearer is seated.

THE Gossard CORSETS
"They Live In Front"

The corset is so designed that it moulds itself to the average figure at once.

Gossard "Front Laced" Corsets are made in many different models—Come to our store and be fitted to your particular model.

POULTRY FEEDING.

When and How to Feed for Good Results.

The high prevailing prices of various cereals and mill by-products used in feeding poultry may cause some breeders to short feed their birds, and to do so is a great mistake. A good laying hen will, after supplying her system, convert the remainder of her digestible food into substances within her body and from which the eggs are made. To half feed poultry means there will be no profit.

Profit Over Cost.

The result of egg laying contests in several states show that if the cost of the food used had been half as much more there would still have been a profit of $5 for every 8 hens. Of course if one has unproductive stock it should be disposed of without regard to the price of the food stuff.

Reducing Stock.

If there are good reasons for reducing stock, the following is recommended: 1. Reduce by discarding all inferior, unthrifty and aged specimens. 2. Dispose of surplus male birds. These eat food and give no return; they also occupy space which should be occupied by profit making pullets. 3. Keep one breed and specialize; breed none but good ones for the purpose in view—not more than two, one for egg production, the other for table-bird breeding.

Best Food to Use.

The average farmer feeds on grain alone. His wife and daughters generally own the poultry, and the fowls gain a good deal of their food in the form of insect life and in the stables and around the feed lots. The farm yield of eggs would be much larger if the farmer would always see to it that the proper food materials were always at hand for feeding the poultry.

At mid-day the fowls should have green food, chopped alfalfa, clover, rape, sprouted oats or kale. A third of the food of fowls should be of this character. At night—an hour before sunset—the birds should have feed of wheat, cracked corn or other good grain. Bran should also be available in self-feeders at all times; its value is largely due to its phosphorus content. The morning ration should consist of ground grains to which one-third in bulk of chopped green food should be added; this mixed with a little bran makes a ration of high feeding value.

Single-test each pullet before using for breeding purposes. If they prove to be good layers they are worth a lot of money; if they are poor layers they should go to the kitchen. Single testing is the only road to success in building up a laying strain.

Pertinent Pointers.

Erect scratching sheds facing the south or east. Use clean straw litter. Feed birds as suggested and see that drinking vessels are clean and provided with clean water. Provide grit (hard and shell), also charcoal grit. Give a daily supply of green food. Keep a sharp lookout for chicken pox. If a few warts or pimples appear on comb, wattles or eyelids, bathe with vinegar and water, dry and then apply carbolic glycerine, 1 in 5. Use epsom salts in the drinking water. Keep coops and brooders and yards in repair and see that all vermin is destroyed.

Strictly fresh eggs are always in demand and at prices that justify proper care of the poultry department of every farm.—Illinois Farmers' Institute, Springfield, Ill.

New Orleans Opens Fight on Disease Carrying Pests.

State and City Health Boards Patrol Water Front—Norfolk Also Takes Precautions.

New Orleans, July 13.—Employees of the city and state health boards have begun a "rat survey" along the river front, proposed and now being directed by Dr. John H. White of the United States Marine hospital service, to protect the city from bubonic plague. Tests upon rats captured will be made today.

Washington, July 13.—The bubonic plague situation in Porto Rico and Cuba is reported to the public health and marine hospital service as unchanged.

From San Juan, Porto Rico, it was announced there were no new cases. At Havana 176 rats were killed. On none of them was any suspicion of plague found.

The health commissioner at Norfolk, Va., has appointed six official rat catchers, and a bounty of five cents for every rat killed.

Bubonic plague has made its appearance at Port of Spain, Trinidad. The American consul there reported one case had developed.

DUNNING INSTITUTION IS NO MORE

OLD CHICAGO INSANE ASYLUM TAKEN OVER BY THE STATE REFORM IN NAMES.

The place "over the hills and far away" that for so many years bore this sombre and ominous name has passed. Cook county which it served as a "poor farm" and an "insane asylum" for so long has created a new poor farm and its name is simply "Oak Forest" and has transferred to the State of Illinois the "Insane Asylum" and it is known as the Chicago State Hospital.

There is a great story in all this. It marks the completion of a long advance by Illinois in the treatment and care of its unfortunate of body and mind.

For the poor, Dunning presented the terrors of the poor farm or almshouse. For the insane, Dunning was the asylum, a place of horrors in the thoughts of the public.

Oak Forest is a home, built by a rich county for the care of its old, feeble, infirm and worn out men and women who are without resources or strength.

The example of the biggest county in the state in abolishing its "poor farm" and substituting its "county home" has been followed by several down state counties whose official boards by vote have changed the name and are now giving more attention to the needs and the humane treatment of those who are spending their last days in these institutions. The word poor farm will soo be unknown in this state.

Since 1907, Illinois has been gathering from the almshouses outside Cook county all the adjudged insane outside Cook and has been transferring them to the state hospitals for insane.

In 1907 the general assembly established it as the policy of the state to have complete care of all adjudged insane. The "complete state care law" provided that the rural almshouses should be emptied first. This done, the State should automatically take over the Cook county hospital for the insane at Dunning.

In 1910 the state abolished the term "asylum" and struck from the titles of state institutions the word "insane", so that now we have the Kankakee State Hospital, the Peoria State Hospital, Chicago State Hospital, etc.

This is why Cook county comes to give up its immense hospital for insane at Dunning and the State assumes the burden and the expense of 3,000 more insane patients.

Dunning while a county almshouse and insane hospital cost Cook county nearly a million dollars a year to maintain and operate.

Several years ago the county established the county home at Oak Forest where it erected a model plant.

But there were left at Dunning about 3,000 insane.

The state hospitals were crowded with insane. To find room for the insane kept on the county farms required new buildings and then more crowding but all such patients have been moved and at midnight on June 30th this year Cook county relinquished Dunning, and the state, complying with its own laws took charge of it and hereafter will maintain and operate it from funds drawn from the state treasury.

Few states in the union have advanced so far in their care and treatment of their insane.

The Largest Candle.

The making of an ordinary domestic wax or tallow candle is sufficiently wonderful to the lay mind to excite comment, but a candle has lately been lighted in Rome that is 11 feet 3 inches in height, and will burn for six years.

In various places of worship candles are used in their symbolic sense, candles of vast proportions, but the one in question is a giant of its clan. The first step in the making of this mammoth candle was to construct the wick, a wick that would burn clearly and cleanly, and need no snuffing.

Suspended by a derrick over a vat of boiling wax, the wick was dipped no fewer than 260 times, till the required quantity of wax adhered to it, and between each dip the wax picked up had to dry off.

Needed Admiration.

"I understand that Mr. Grabwell started in life by borrowing $50. You must admire a man who borrows like that." "No, I don't," replied Mr. Growcher. "The man I admire is the one who had the courage to lend him the fifty."

Michael Hunt of Fayette township, Ogle county, was a visitor here today.

BOYS STEAL PEACHES.

Roy Bridges of the Downing grocery store yesterday discovered the novel way some small boys have been stealing peaches from the stand in front of the store, and it is believed he frightened the young miscreants to such an extent that they will hesitate before committing any more petty thefts.

The boys had gone up stairs in the Eells building, by the Galena avenue entrance, had then passed through to the steel building and sneaked down the stairs next to Downing's. By reaching carefully around the corner and under the covering they were able to get a basket of peaches, after which they retraced their steps.

People on the other side of the street saw the performance and immediately notified Mr. Bridges, who gave chase, finally catching the youngsters. He gave them a thorough scare and a promise that a repetition of the trick would result in their arrest.

ELECTRICITY

The Servant in the HOUSE

The average shop, or office or store is equipped in more or less degree with labor saving devices. It is if it is modern.

If the headpiece of the boss isn't solid bone, there's probably knowledge in it that these appliances add a snap to the working force. They subtract some of the strain.

There's a heap of inevitable and exhausting drudgery in the average American household. The stress that proceeds from it can be relieved just as strain is eased in the business establishment if the house is equipped for Electric Service.

Then you've only to press a button and a tireless, willing servant is ready instantly to tackle that back-breaking wash tub, or navigate that carpet sweeper, or run that sewing machine, or transfer that ironing from a stewing kitchen into another room or out-doors in summer.

And all this and other kinds of work will be done at a trifling cost. Electrical labor saving appliances lengthen women's lives.

If your house isn't equipped for electric light and power, you can have the work done by us at cost, with payments spread over two years, divided into monthly installments. The EXPENSE is small.

CHAPTER I.

What's in a Name?

To possess two distinctly alien red corpuscles in one's blood, metaphorically if not in fact, two characters or individualities under one epidermis, is, in most cases, a peculiar disadvantage. One hears of scoundrels and saints striving to consume one another in one body, angels and harpies; but oftentimes, quite the contrary to being a curse, these two warring temperaments become a man's ultimate blessing: as in the case of George P. A. Jones, of Mortimer & Jones, the great metropolitan Oriental rug and carpet company, all of which has a dignified, sonorous sound. George was divided within himself. This he would not have confessed even into the trusted if battered ear of the Egyptian Sphinx. There was, however, no demon-angel sparring for points in George's soul. The difficulty might be set forth in this manner: On one side stood inherent common sense; on the other, a boundless, roseate imagination which was like-wise inherent—a kind of quixotic imagination of suitable modern pattern. This alter ego terrified him whenever it raised its strangely beautiful head and shouldered aside his guardian angel (for that's what common sense is, argue to what end you will) and pleaded in that luminous rhetoric under the spell of which our old friend Sancho often fell asleep.

P. A., as they called him behind the counters, was but twenty-eight, and if he was vice-president in his late father's shoes he didn't wobble round in them to any great extent. In a crowd he was not noticeable; he didn't stand head and shoulders above his fellow-men, nor would he have been mistaken by near-sighted persons, the myopes, for the Vatican's Apollo in the flesh. He was of medium height, beardless, slender, but tough and wiry and enduring. You may see his prototype on the streets a dozen times a day, and you may also pass him without turning round for a second view. Young men like P. A. must be intimately known to be admired; you did not throw your arm across his neck, first-off. His hair was brown and closely clipped about a head that would have gained the attention of the phrenologist, if not that of the casual passer-by. His bumps, in the phraseology of that science, were good ones. For the rest, he observed the world through a pair of kindly, shy, blue eyes.

Young girls, myopic through ignorance or silliness, seeing nothing beyond what the eyes see, seldom gave him a second inspection; for he did not know how to make himself attractive, and was mortally afraid of the opposite, or opposing sex. He could bullyrag a sheik out of his camels' saddle-bags, but petticoats and lace parasols and small Oxford's had the same effect upon him that the prodding stick of a small boy has upon a retreating turtle. But many a worldly-wise woman, drawing out with tact and kindness the truly beautiful thoughts of this young man's soul, sadly demanded of fate why a sweet, clean, boy like this one had not been sent to her in her youth. You see, the worldly-wise woman knows that it is invariably the lay-figure and not Prince Charming that a woman marries, and that matrimony is blind man's buff in grown-ups.

Many of us lay the blame upon our parents. We shift the burden of wondering why we have this fault and lack that grace to the shoulders of our immediate forbears. We go to the office each morning denying that we have any reason for the worrying. But George never went prospecting in his soul for any such dross philosophy. He was grateful for having had so beautiful a mother; proud of having had so honest a sire; and if either of them had ended him with false weights he did his best to even up the balance.

The mother had been as romantic as any heroine out of Mrs. Radcliffe's novels, while the father had owned to as much romance as one generally finds in a thorough business man, which is practically none at all. The very name itself is a bulwark against the intrusions of romance. One can not lift the imagination to the prospect of picturing a Jones in ruffles and highboots, pinking a varlet in the midriff. It smells of sugar-barrels and cotton-bales, of steamships and railroads, of stolid routine in the office and of placid concern over the daily news under the evening lamp.

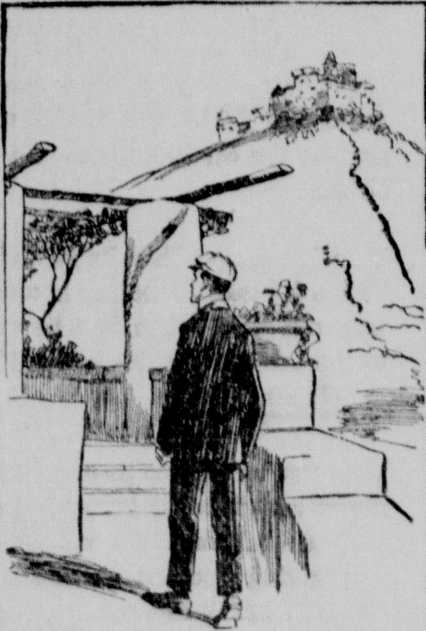

Mrs. Jones, lovely, lettered yet not worldly, had dreamed of her boy, bayed and decorated, marrying the most distinguished woman in all Europe, whoever she might be. Mr. Jones had had no dreams at all, and had put the boy to work in the shipping department a little while after the college threshold had been crossed, outward bound. The mother, while sweet and gentle, had a will, iron under velvet, and when she held out for Percival Algernon and a decent knowledge of modern languages, the old man agreed if, on the other hand, the boy's first name should be George and that he should learn the business from the cellar up. There were several tilts over the matter, but at length a truce was declared. It was agreed that the boy himself ought to have a word to say upon a subject which concerned him more vitally than any one else. So, at the age of fifteen, when he was starting off for preparatory school, he was advised to choose for himself. He was an obedient son, adoring his mother and idolizing his father. He wrote himself down as George Percival Algernon Jones, promised to become a linguist and to learn the rug business from the cellar up. On the face of it, it looked like a big job; it all depended upon the boy.

The first day at school his misery began. He had signed himself as George P. A. Jones, no small diplomacy for a lad; but the two initials, standing up like dismantled plines in the midst of uninteresting landscape, roused the curiosity of his schoolmates. Boys are boys the world over, and possess a finesse in cruelty that only Indians can match; and it did not take them long to unearth the fatal secret. For three years he was Percy Aigy, and not only the boys laughed, but the pretty girls sniggered. Many a time he had returned to his dormitory decorated (not in accord with the fond hopes of his mother) with a swollen ear, or a ruddy proboscis, or a green-brown eye. There was a limit, and when they stepped over that, why, he proceeded to the best of his ability to solve the difficulty with his fists. George was no milkop; but Percival Algernon would have been the Old Man of the Sea on broader shoulders than his. He dimly realized that had he been named George Henry William Jones his sun would have been many diameters larger. There was a splendid quality of pluck under his apparent timidity, and he stuck doggedly to it. He never wrote home and complained. What was good enough for his mother was good enough for him.

It seemed just an ordinary matter of routine for him to pick up French and German verbs. He was far from being brilliant, but he was sensitive and his memory was sound. Since his mother's ambition was to see him an accomplished linguist, he applied himself to the task as if everything in the world depended upon it, just as he knew that when the time came he would apply himself as thoroughly to the question of rugs and carpets.

Under all this filial loyalty ran the pure strain of golden romance, side by side with the lesser metal of practicality. When he began to read the masters he preferred their romances to their novels. He even wrote poetry in secret, and when his mother discovered the fact she cried over the sentimental verses. The father had to be told. He laughed and declared that the boy would some day develop into a good writer of advertisements. This quiet laughter, unburdened as it was with ridicule, was enough to set George's muse a-awing, and she never came back.

After leaving college he was given a modest letter of credit and told to go where he pleased for a whole year. George started out at once in quest of the Holy Grail, and there are more roads to that than there are to Rome. One may be reasonably sure of getting into Rome, whereas the Holy Grail (diversified, variable, innumerable) is always the exact sum of a bunch of hay hanging before old Dobbin's nose. Nevertheless, George galloped his fancies with loose rein. He haunted romance, burrowed and plowed for it; and never his spade clanged musically against the hidden treasure, never a forlorn beauty in distress, not so much as chapter one of the Golden Book offered its dazzling first page. George lost some confidence.

Two or three times a woman looked into the young man's mind, and in his guilelessness they effected sundry holes in his letter of credit, but left his soul singularly untouched. The red corpuscle, his father's gift, though it lay dormant, subconsciously erected barriers. He was innocent, but he was no fool. That one year taught him the lesson, rather cheaply, too. If there was any romance in life, it came uninvited, and if courted and sought was as quick on the wing as that erstwhile poetry must.

The year passed, and while he had not wholly given up the quest, the practical George agreed with the romantic Percival to shelve it indefinitely. He returned to New York with thirty-two pounds sterling out of the original thousand, a fact that rejuvenated his paternal parent by some ten years.

"Jane, that boy is all right. Percival Algernon could not kill a boy like that."

"Do you mean to infer that it ever could?" Sometimes a quail wrinkled her conscience. Her mother's heart told her that her son ought not to be shy and bashful, that it was not in the nature of his blood to suspect ridicule where there was none. Perhaps she had handicapped him with those names; but it was too late now to admit of this, and useless, since it would not have remedied the evil.

Jones hemmed and hawed for a space. "No," he answered; "but I was afraid he might try to live up to it; and no Percival Algernon who lived up to it could put his nose down to a Shah Abbas and tell how many knots it had to the square inch. I'll start him in on the job tomorrow."

Whereupon the mother sat back dreamily. Now, where was the girl worthy of her boy? Monumental question, besetting every mother, from Eve down, Eve, whose trials in this direction must have been heartrending!

George left the cellar in due time, and after that he went up the ladder in bounds, on his own merit, mind you, for his father never stirred a hand to boost him. He took the interest in rugs that turns a buyer into a collector; it became a fascinating pleasure rather than a business. He became invaluable to the house, and acquired some fame as a judge and an appraiser. When the chief buyer retired George was given the position, with an itinerary that carried him half way round the planet once a year, to Greece, Turkey, Persia, Arabia, and India, the lands of the genii and the bottles, of arabesques, of temples and tombs, of many-colored turbans and flowing robes and distracting tongues. He walked and always in a kind of mental enchantment.

The suave and elusive Oriental, with his sharp practices, found his match in this pleasant young man, who knew the history of the very wools and cottons and silks woven in a rug or carpet. So George prospered, became known in strange places, by strange peoples; and saw romance, light of foot and eager of eye, pass and repass; learned that romance did not essentially mean falling in love or rescuing maidens from burning houses and wrecks; that, on the contrary, true romance was kaleidoscopic, having more brilliant facets than a diamond; and that the man who begins with nothing and ends with something is more wonderful than any excursion recounted by Sinbad or any tale by Scheherazade. But he still hoped that the iridescent goddess would some day touch his shoulder and lead him into that maze of romance so peculiar to his own fancy.

And then into this little world of business and pleasure came death and death again, leaving him alone and with a twisted heart. Riches mattered little, and the sounding title of vice-president still less. It was with a distinct shock that he realized the mother and the father had been with him so long that he had forgotten to make other friends. From one thing to another he turned in hope to soothe the smart, to heal the wound; and after a time he drifted, as all shy, intelligent and imaginative men drift who are friendless, into the silent and intimate comradeship of inanimate things, such as jewels, ivories, old metals, rare woods and ancient embroideries, and perhaps more comforting than all these, good books.

The proper tale of how the afore-said iridescent goddess jostled (for it scarce may be said that she led) him into a romance lacking neither comedy nor tragedy, now begins with a trifling bit of retrospection. One of those women who were not good and who looked into the clear pool of the boy's mind saw the harmless longing there, and made note, hoping to find profit by her knowledge when the pertinent day arrived. She was a woman so pleasing, so handsome, so adroit, that many a man, older and wiser than George, found her mesh too strong for him. Her plan matured, suddenly and brilliantly, as projects of men and women of her class and caliber without variation do.

Late one December afternoon (to be precise, 1909), George sat on the tea-veranda of the Hotel Semiramis in Cairo. A book lay idly upon his knees. It was one of those yarns in which something was happening every other minute. As adventures go, George had never had a real one in all his twenty-eight years, and he believed that fate had treated him rather shabbily. He didn't quite appreciate her reserve. No matter how late he wandered through the mysterious bazaars, either here in Egypt or over yonder in India, nothing ever befell more exciting than an argument with a carriage-driver. He never carried small-arms, for he would not have known how to use them. The only deadly things in his hands were bass-roads and tennis-rackets. No, nothing ever happened to him; yet he never met a man in a ship's smoke-room who hadn't run the gamut of thrilling experiences. As George wasn't a liar himself, he believed all he saw and most of what he heard.

Well, here he was, eight-and-twenty, a pocket full of money, a heart full of life, and as hopeless an outlook, so far as romance and adventure were concerned, as an old maid in a New England village. Why couldn't things befall him as they did the chap in this book? He was sure he could behave as well, if not better; for this fellow was too handsome, too brave, too strong, not to be something of an ass once in a while.

"George, you old fool, what's the use?" he thought. "What's the use of a desire that never goes in a straight line, but always round and round in a circle?"

He thrust aside his grievance and surrendered to the never-ending wonder of the Egyptian sunset; the Nile feluccas, riding upon perfect reflection's loneliness. If only he had had a dog; but one can not carry a dog half way round the world and back, at least not with comfort. What with all these new-fangled quarantine laws, duties, and fussy ships' officers who wouldn't let you keep the animal in your state-room, traveling with a four-footed friend was almost an impossibility. To be sure, women with poodles. . . . And then, there was the bitter of acid in the knowledge that no one ever came up to him and slapped him on the shoulder with a—

"Hello, Georgie, old sport; what's the good word?" for the simple fact that his shoulder was always bristling with spikes, born of the fear that some one was making fun of him.

Perchance his mother's spirit, hovering over him this evening, might have been inclined to tears. For they do say that the ghosts of the dear ones are thus employed when we are near to committing some folly, or to exploring some forgotten chamber of Pandora's box, or worse still, when that lady intends emptying the whole contents down upon our unfortunate heads. If so be, they were futile tears; Percival Algernon had accomplished its deadly purpose.

Pandora? Well, then, for the benefit of the children. She was a lady who was an intimate friend of the mythological gods. They liked her appearance so well that they one day gave her a box, casket, chest, or whatever it was, to guard. By some marvelous method, known only of gods, they had got together all the trials and tribulations of mankind (and some of the joys) and locked them up in this casket. It was the Golden Age, as you may surmise. You recall Eve and the apple? Well, Pandora was a forecast of Eve; she couldn't keep her eyes off the latch, and at length her hands—Fatal curiosity! Whirr! And everything has been at sixes and at sevens since that time. Pandora is eternally recurring, now here, now there; she is a blonde sometimes, and again she is a brunette; and you may take it from George and me that there is always something left in the casket.

George closed the book and consulted his sailing-list. In a short time he would leave for Port Said, thence to Naples, Christmas there, and home in January. Business had been ripping. He would be jolly glad to get home again, to renew his comradeship with his treasures. And, by Jove! there was one man who slapped him on the shoulder, and he was no less a person than the genial president of the firm, his father's partner, at present his own. If the old chap had had a daughter now. . . . And here one comes at last to the bottom of the sack. He had only one definite longing, a healthy human longing, the only long worth while in all this deep, wide, round old top; to love a woman and by her be loved.

At exactly half after six the gentleman with the reversible cuffs arrived; and George missed his boat.

This Girl Was Elegant, in Dress, in Movement.

tions; the date-palms, black and motionless against the translucent blue of the sky; the amethystine prisms of the Pyramids, and the deepening gold of the desert's brim. He loved the Orient, always so new, always so strange, yet ever so old and familiar.

A carriage stopped in front, and his gaze naturally shifted. There is ceaseless attraction in speculating about new-comers in a hotel, what they are, what they do, where they come from, and where they are going. A fine elderly man of fifty got out. In the square set of his shoulders, the flowing white mustache and imperial, there was a suggestion of militarism. He was immediately followed by a young woman of twenty, certainly not over that age. George sighed wistfully. He envied those polo-players and gentleman-riders and bridge-experts who were stopping at the hotel. It wouldn't be an hour after dinner before some one of them found out who she was and spoke to her in that easy style which he concluded must be a gift rather than an accomplishment. You mustn't suppose for a minute that George wasn't well-born and well-bred, simply because his name was Jones.

Many a Fitz-Hugh Maurice or Hugh Fitz-Maurice might have been— But, no matter. He knew instinctively, then, what elegance was when he saw it, and this girl was elegant, in dress, in movement. He rather liked the pallor of her skin, which hinted that she wasn't one of those athletic girls who bounced in and out of the dining-room, talking loudly and smoking cigarettes and playing bridge for six-penny points. She was tall. He was sure that her eyes were on the level with his own. The grey veil that drooped from the rim of her simple Leghorn hat to the tip of her nose obscured her eyes, so he could not know that they were large and brown and indefinitely sad. They spoke not of a weariness of travel, but of a weariness of the world, more precisely, of the people who inhabited it.

She and her companion passed on into the hotel, and if George's eyes veered again toward the desert over which the stealthy purples of night were creeping, the impulse was mechanical; he saw nothing. In truth, he was desperately lonesome, and he knew, moreover, that he had no business to be. He was young; he could at a pinch tell a joke as well as the next man; and if he had never had what he called an adventure, he had seen many strange and wonderful things and could describe them with that mental afterglow which still lingers over the sunset of our first expressions in poetry. But there was always that hydra-headed monster, for ever getting about his feet, numbing his voice, paralyzing his hands, and never he lopped off a head that another did not instantly grow in its place. Even the sword of Perseus could not have saved him, since one has to get away from an object in order to cut it down.

Had he really ever tried to overcome this monster? Had he not waited for the propitious moment (which you and I know never comes) to throw off this species from Hades? It is all very well, when you are old and dried up, to turn to ivories and metals and precious stones; but when a fellow's young! You can't shake hands with an ivory replica of the Taj Mahal, nor exchange pleasantries with a Mandarin's ring, nor yet confide joys and ills into a casket of rare emeralds; indeed, they do but emphasize one's loneliness. If only he had had a dog; but one can not carry a dog half way round the world and back, at least not with comfort. What with all these new-fangled quarantine laws, duties, and fussy ships' officers who wouldn't let you keep the animal in your state-room, traveling with a four-footed friend was almost an impossibility. CHARGED WITH BRIBERY

Gov. Blease of South Carolina Accused by Attorney Felder.

Augusta, Ga., July 13.—Testifying in the courthouse here before an investigating committee of the South Carolina legislature Thomas B. Felder, an attorney of Atlanta, accused Gov. Cole L. Blease of that state of having taken bribes from whisky houses which supplied liquor to the South Carolina dispensaries, bribes for his influence in directing the course of bills in the legislature, bribes for protection extended to "blind tigers," and a bribe of $2,000 for pardoning Rudolph Rabon, a notorious "fence." Felder gave names and details and supported his accusations with evidence gathered by agents of William J. Burns.

JUDGE TO FIX TRIAL DATE

Republican and Democratic Senators Agree That He Should Decide.

Washington, July 13.—The solemn ceremonies of impeachment of Judge Robert W. Archbald of the commerce court in the senate will depend as to date largely upon the preference expressed by the accused jurist. At least a majority of the Republican senators prefer to postpone the formal proceedings until cooler weather, meantime allowing both the house and counsel for defense ample time for preparation. The Democratic senators are more disposed to favor earlier action, but both sides agreed that Judge Archbald's preference should be given serious consideration.

RULES ON NATURALIZATION

Wife and Minor Children Affected, Holds Secretary Nagel.

Washington, July 13.—Naturalization of an alien confers citizenship not only upon himself and his wife, but also upon all his minor children, even though none of them have ever been in this country. Secretary Nagel so held in a decision and completely reversed the previous policy of the government.

Goes to Teach in China.

San Francisco, July 13.—George Irving Adams, until recently of the staff of the United States geological survey at Washington, has sailed for China to take charge of the mining and geological department of the National Pei Yang university at Tientsin.

Dixon Citizens Gladly Testify and Confidently Recommend Doan's Kidney Pills

It is testimony like the following that has placed Doan's Kidney Pills so far above competitors. When people right here at home raise their voice in praise there is no room left for doubt. Read the public statement of a Dixon citizen.

John Salzman, 103 Artesian Ave., Dixon, Ill., says: "I have no reason to change my good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I publicly expressed some years ago. I had back ache a great deal and pains across my loins. My kidneys did not act regularly and I felt miserable in every way. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Leake Bros. Co's Drug store and they did god work, relieving me. I keep them in the house and whenever I take them, they help me."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents or the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

MARITAL WOES END

MASCAGNI AND WIFE LONG ESTRANGED BY HER JEALOUSY.

Report in Rome That Composer's Spouse in Grief and Mortification Tried to Kill Self.

Rome, July 13.—The sensation caused by the elopement Tuesday night of the composer, Mascagni, with Irma Bernini, a vaudeville dancer, was a sequel to a terrible family scene during which Mme. Mascagni wounded the composer on the arm.

Signor Mascagni had just returned from a visit to the young woman. Apparently Mme. Mascagni had followed her husband's taxi cab and thus discovered the meeting place of the lovers.

According to report the composer, on being confronted with the facts by his angry better half, confessed, telling his wife that he had found that life with her was impossible. At this Mme. Mascagni, who is reputed to be a modern Xantippe, struck her husband with a heavy key.

The composer's children, strangely enough, took sides with their father, and Mme. Mascagni is said to have vented her displeasure on her daughter, who left the house with her father.

Mme. Mascagni took up the pursuit of her fleeing spouse on the following day, but friends intercepted her at Florence, persuading her to return to Rome to avoid adding to the scandal.

A report was current here that Mme. Mascagni, overcome by grief and mortification at the desertion of her husband, had attempted suicide. The Mascagnis have not lived harmoniously together for a long time. Acquaintances attribute their disagreements partly to the composer's erratic temperament and partly to the violent temper of his wife, who, though devotedly attached to her husband, has no patience with his eccentricities and whose intense jealousy of him has caused several public scenes between them in the past.

Solid As a Rock!

Here is the absolutely new and original device used only on the old reliable Saginaw Silo, which makes it as solid as one piece of granite—as immovable as a mountain. It is our Handy Inner Anchoring Hoop, which circles the inside of the silo above the silage and directly opposite the top outside hoop. It supports any stave that might loosen and prevents them falling inward. Once in place, it needs no attention, no adjusting. Cables from anchoring points to ground rods complete support that dynamite could hardly move. No loose staves! No falling in! No blowing down! Write today for details. FOREST STOPS POSSE'S HUNT

Town Marshals, Constables and Farmers, Hunting Bandit, Give Up Search—Woods Too Dense for Dogs.

Aurora, July 13.—The posse of constables, town marshals and farmers which has been hunting through the outer brush of the big forest near Plattville, the supposed hiding place of a Twentieth Century Dick Turpin who shot at citizens from a galloping pony, gave up the search and dispersed. Nobody cared to penetrate the dense woods, and when a blood hound could not be urged to make a dash into the timber the enthusiasm of the pursuers died.

Body Sent to Chicago.

Rock Island, July 13.—J. W. Brennan arrived here from Chicago to accompany to Chicago the remains of his brother, Richard Brennan, who was found dead in a ravine near St. Anthony's hospital, where he had been a patient for treatment of delirium tremens and from which institution he escaped. Deceased was a member of Chicago Gravel Workers' union but had been employed here some time. He leaves a widow and two children in Chicago. He left his wife in 1906.

Train Crew Lose Jobs.

Duquoin, July 13.—The entire crew of a freight train on the Illinois Central railroad has been discharged from the service of the company following an investigation of a rear-end collision in which a passenger hit the freight two miles south of Centralia, injuring eight persons, two persons fatally. The discharged men are Engineer J. Emery, Fireman E. Marsh, Conductor Ed Reedas, Brakemen Clarence Thomas and Thomas Carlyle and Flagman E. Smith.

Preacher Sees Son Drown.

Dixon, July 13.—William Harris, aged fourteen, son of Rev. W. C. B. Harris, pastor of the Lutheran church at Oregon, was drowned in Rock river. He and his father were fishing on the dam, when the boy fell into the turbulent water below the cataract. The clergyman tried to save the boy and was nearly drowned himself before being rescued.

Gates Heir Defies Doctors for Girl.

Aurora, July 13.—Henry Rockwell Baker, the nephew and heir of John W. Gates, who on the advice of physicians was taken to Colorado Springs for the summer for lung trouble, refuses to remain in bed, as physicians advised. Instead, he is out daily, motoring in his big new car with Miss Nina Carleson of St. Charles, his fiancée.

Gets Wrong License, But Weds Girl.

Waukegan, July 13.—Just as Anthony J. Johnson of Chicago and Miss Gertrude Vose were to be married at the home of the bride's parents, west of Gurnee, it was discovered that the groom-to-be had brought a Cook county marriage license. He had to get in an auto and speed to Waukegan for a Lake county license.

Mayor Helps Lay Water Mains.

Herrin, July 13.—Work on the $63,000 waterworks plant began and Mayor Anderson, who has advocated the improvement for more than a year, put on overalls and defying the sun's heat, registering 90, helped lay the water mains down Park avenue. The plant will be owned by the city.

Meals to Labor Forty-Five Years.

Cairo, July 13.—Obe Meals was sentenced by the Pulaski county circuit court to spend forty-five years at hard labor in the penitentiary, the first two days of each year to be spent in solitary confinement. He was tried on a charge of killing Marshal Robert Chasteen of Ullin a year ago.

Tennis Title to Decatur Attorney.

Decatur, July 13.—Attorney Phillip Miller of Decatur won the singles trophy in the central Illinois tennis tournament by defeating Bernard of Springfield in straight sets, 6-3, 8-6, 6-0. The tournament, which has been in session here all week, closed.

Farmers Harvest Short Wheat Crop.

Carlyle, July 13.—All of the wheat in Clinton county has been harvested and the farmers are now cutting oats and hay. It was predicted that wheat would be a complete failure, but although the crop is short, recent rains were beneficial.

Girl Wins Diamond Ring.

Paxton, July 13.—At the carnival being held here by the Clinton Kelly shows in the $50 diamond ring contest on the most popular young lady in Paxton, Miss Marie Luxton won the ring. Miss Pet Bobo was a good second.

Stricken While Feeding Chickens.

Kewanee, July 13.—While at his daily task of feeding his chickens, John N. Cochenour, a wealthy retired farmer, was stricken with apoplexy and died immediately.

Boy Drowns in Wading Pool.

Decatur, July 13.—Dale Birt, the seven-year-old son of Arthur Birt, was drowned in the Nelson park wading pool here.

Let Hymns Be Spontaneous.

Music has long been notoriously a provoker of discord. Once in my news-hunting days I suffered the ignominy of a "scoop" on a choir rumpus, and I thereupon formed the habit of lending an anxious ear to rumors of trouble in choir lofts. The average ladder-like Te Deum, built up for the display of the soprano's vocal prowess, has always struck me as an unholy thing. I even believe that the horrors of highly embellished offertories have done much to tighten purse strings and deaden generous impulses. The presence behind the pulpit of a languid quartet praising God on behalf of the bored sinners in the pews has always seemed to me the profanest of anomalies. Nor has long contemplation of vested choirs in Episcopal churches shaken my belief that church music should be an affair of the congregation.—Meredith Nicholson in the Atlantic Monthly.

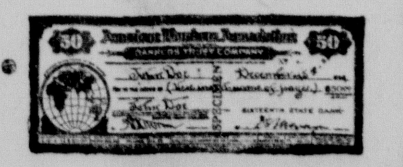

New York's Language Need.

A protest against the neglect of German in New York has been made to the board of education by citizens of German descent, who ask also for the appointment of a supervisor of modern languages. The modern language most necessary in New York just now is English, and in justice to the schools we must remember that to a majority of New York's four million it is a foreign language. Probably no city in the history of the world has had so huge and heterogeneous an alien population to deal with.—Springfield Republican.

24 HOUR SALESMEN

YOUR best salesmen cannot work more than 12 hours a day.
An advertisement of your goods in this paper works while you sleep and wake—24 hours a day.
It works in many households at the same time.
It talks better than the most fluent salesman.
No one slams the door in its face.
RESULT: It sells goods.
About the cost? Far less than the salesman and does lots more work.

THIS INTERESTS YOU

If You Do Not Own Your Own Home.

You know how difficult it is to rent a suitable house in Dixon at the present time.

Why not stop paying rent and have a home of your own?

This association was organized to help you own your home as it has helped hundreds of others.

Our funds are loaned to you and are repayable in monthly payments.

Our office is in the opera block and our secretary will be pleased to explain our plan.

Over 25 years in business.
